

THE DEPARTMENT OF HISPANIC STUDIES FROM THE UNIVERSITY OF HOUSTON

Informes that the jury of the Fourth Convocation for the Literary Prize Escritura Revuelta formed, in alphabetical order, by Efraín Barradas, professor of literature; Pedro Gutiérrez, professor of literature; y Rosaura Sánchez, professor of literature, following the established regulations, has determined the following ruling that is made public today, October 26, 2022:

awarding the first prize of poetry to the set of poems titled “El animal y el reino” which, once the application was opened, turned out to belong to Gonzalo Díaz-Letelier from the graduate program at the University of California, Riverside; this award is endowed with two thousand dollars;

and awarding the first prize of narrative to the short story titled “Rigor mortis” which, once the application was opened, turned out to belong to Diana Salomé Benalcázar from the graduate program at the University of Houston; this award is endowed with two thousand dollars;

and also awarding an honorable mention for narrative extracts titled “La Caja” which, once the application was opened, turned out to belong to José María Urdaneta Azuero from the graduate program at the University of California, Irvine.

April 2023 at the University of Houston, on a date yet to be determined, a presential and virtual celebration will be organized in which the authors themselves will present the winning work.

Note: This literary prize, as its rules establish, awards only one prize for each convocation; since covid did not permit the 2020 award, for this convocation two prizes are awarded.
